Jenny Williams

More Lives Than One: A Biography of Hans Fallada Jenny Williams, 2012-02-02 Hans Fallada was a drug addict, womanizer, alcoholic, jailbird and thief. This title tells the story of Hans Fallada, whose real name was Rudolf Ditzen. It chronicles his turbulent life as a writer, husband and father, shadowed by mental torment and long periods in psychiatric care.

Fridolin the Cheeky Badger Hans Fallada, 2021-04-25 Badger matures, loses a few brothers, has quarrels with his mum, is pursued by fox, leaves, moves again, and eventually settles in with the Ditzens, Hans Fallada's family. They don't like him because he destroys the cornfield. He's meant to be wiped out, but that doesn't happen. They are ecstatic that they are unable to contact him. The whole thing is written in a humorous manner. But it's still unromantically distant; badgers, foxes, and other animals are ironized as self-sufficient, which means carrots, chickens and corn. They still come first, and while wild animals are appealing to the eye, they must die if they do too much harm. It's a mentality seen, for example, in Otto Boris' Fuchs Schade as well, and it's most likely attributable to the period in which it was published (war and post-war years). Even if one overlooks this and a few slight contradictions, such as the foxes' green eyes (there are, admittedly, worse offenses), Fridolin is a fun, linguistically appealing read for adults. A tragic sidenote: the manuscript was sent to Fallada's daughter Mücke as a Christmas gift three years before his death in a mental institution during his happy period in Carwitz.

Young Love Anja Schmidt-Ott, 2002 This work compares seven novels by writers of different political backgrounds. Concentrating on the experience of young love in the novels, it alternates sociological and literary analyses. Issues like the presentation of men and women, the attitudes to love displayed by the National Socialist state, the characterisation of society and the socio-cultural debates around the ideals of masculinity and femininity of the 1920s and the 1930s are considered. In so doing this work gives substance to notions such as the 'crisis of manhood', the 'motherly woman' and the 'backlash against modernity'. This comparative approach establishes strikingly similar features in gender roles and the social place of love in quite disparate works revealing new insights into the Mentalitätsgeschichte of the 1930s.

Hans Fallada's Crisis Novels, 1931-1947 Geoff Wilkes, 2002 Part of the 'Australian and New Zealand Studies in German Language and Literature' series, this text covers the crisis novels of Hans Fallada from 1931-1947.
